Course Overview

This course, offered by Magna Skills, equips participants with the essential skills to design, conduct, analyze, and report qualitative research in professional, academic, and policy-driven environments. The training emphasizes practical techniques used in real-world contexts across sectors such as public administration, NGOs, social sciences, education, business, and development programs.

Participants will learn how to formulate appropriate research questions, select qualitative methods, gather credible data through interviews, focus groups, and observations, and apply thematic and content analysis to derive meaningful insights. Magna Skills ensures a hands-on learning experience enriched with case studies, ethical considerations, and digital tools for qualitative research.

By the end of the course, learners will be fully capable of planning and executing qualitative studies that support evidence-based decision-making within their organizations and development projects.

Course Outcomes

Upon successful completion of this course, participants should be able to:

1. Understand core concepts and foundations of qualitative research methodology.
- 2.

Develop research questions, proposals, and sampling strategies for qualitative studies.

3. Apply appropriate qualitative data collection methods in field and organizational settings.
4. Analyze and interpret qualitative data using coding, thematic analysis, and digital tools.
5. Present qualitative results clearly through structured academic or institutional reports.
